If there's one thing its harder to make a living at in America than painting, it's sculpting. And Clarence E. "Clancy" Bates is just the man to know — for he's tried both.

Working at the Carmel Craft Center as one of the few full-time sculptors in the country, Clancy says the tide has finally turned, that contemporary architecture has created a place for sculpture in the home, and that people are again buying it as a result. Whatever reason, this is a phenomenon that has been widely noted and commented on these past few years.

Bates got an early start toward appreciating the stern discipline that environment exercises on art, for born in 1910 he was raised on a farm outside Eugene, Oregon.

Wood was all-available, and if you carved anything, it was out of wood. On the other hand, for a time his family moved to Idaho near an old mining town where all kinds of clay was at hand from the old creek beds. Willy-nilly, Bates found that that was what he was using for his restless modeling. The experience has made him thoughtful about materials ever since.

Of average height, with a youthful face and a shock of prematurely iron-grey hair, Bates says that his family came to Oregon quite early from Missouri. His grand-

Community Calendar In "Idea" Column

The Town Journal, a monthly publication, will carry a brief account of Carmel's Community Calendar in one of its issues shortly. It has a monthly feature titled Along Main Street, which deals with "unusual ideas for community or business improvement," according to associate editor, Clyde Hostetter.

The community calendar is being compiled by the P.T.A. and Carmel Recreation Director William Wakefield. Organizations who have not done so are asked to mail dates they have set for meetings, concerts, and various events to William Wakefield, Box 500, Carmel. The calendar is nearing completion and will be kept in the Pine Cone office where people, when scheduling events, may phone to avoid conflict with competing activities.

County Symphony Soloist Compares Jorda, Monteux

David Abel, 19 year old San Francisco violinist who will be soloist with the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra Monday in Salinas and Tuesday in Carmel, is scheduled to appear with the Boston Symphony under Pierre Monteux in February. There will be three concerts with the San Francisco Symphony, Enrique Jorda conducting, before the Boston performance.

In discussing the schedule recently, Abel spoke of the workout with Jorda as a "good forerunner of what may be expected under Monteux.

His comment on the two conductors: "Both are severe perfectionists with their orchestras—Jorda only less so than Monteux because of his age. The picture the public gets of gentle, fatherly old Monteux is not quite accurate. He is a tyrant with his baton, particularly over young violinists."

Asked what his reaction is to Monterey Symphony's conductor, Gregory Millar, he said: "Monterey County should be thankful to have a man of such outstanding talent. I have played under him before and I think he compares with the best of all conductors that I know. He has a sense of musical timing that is unequaled by anyone and, more important to me as a violinist, he has a great sympathy for my instrument."

Gert Muser In Concert At Sunset On November 25

Gert Muser, operatic baritone, will be presented in concert Friday night at 8:30 o'clock at Sunset Auditorium by Mrs. A. M. Allan of Point Lobos and Dr. Harvey Marshall of the Music Department of Monterey Peninsula College.

Mr. Muser is at present an instructor in the German Department of the Army Language School and one of the many to be dismissed very shortly, in accordance with the reduced Army budget. He was at the Army Language School only two months when the dismissal order was issued.

Prior to coming to this country two years ago, Mr. Muser devoted his entire time to singing in the leading opera houses of Europe. He has made numerous appearances in leading roles at the State Opera of Stuttgart, Germany. Because of his enormous successes he received a five year contract as baritone of the National Opera House of Mannheim, Germany and stepped into further prominence when the Vienna State Opera invited him for 15 guest performances during the 1952-1955 season. He was also the winner of the International Music Contest of Lausanne, Switzerland. He has appeared in some 900 opera performances and more than 800 concerts.

Since his arrival in this country he has made frequent concert and radio appearances.

Mrs. Mary Whitmer will be his accompanist.

Tickets are obtainable at the music stores at nominal cost. They also may be purchased at the box-office at Sunset School before the performances.

"Algebra Isn't What It Used To Be;" Carmel HS Parents Go To School

BY MARJORY LLOYD

Two hundred and fifty-eight dinners were served to high school parents and the teaching staff of the school on Tuesday evening. The parents lined up just as their children do each noon and were speedily handed a turkey dinner, (cost 40c) on a cafeteria tray. They sat at the tables, informally talking with other parents and teachers. Before and after dinner the parents went to school.

Because of a particular interest, we followed the schedule of the freshman class. Arriving at the high school at 6:00 o'clock, we were given a schedule at the office and set out in the cool evening air to find Room 4, and start off our simulated school day with Mrs. Ellen Down and algebra.

Fortunately, some thoughtful person had set out direction signs as we had no idea where algebra was taught. Greeting friends on every side, all looking for their first class, we arrived at Room 4 and Mrs. Down. "Algebra isn't what it used to be," we thought as we looked at a fine chart describing and elucidating all that business about minus times minus and minus times plus and plus times plus. Then we glanced at all the fine colored art work on the walls which Mrs. Down explained "is not art. Each design represents a geometry problem, worked out by a pupil with a great deal of thought."

Arithmetic is the problem of the students we were told. "Each year," said Mrs. Down, "I moan about arithmetic. It is not the fault of this particular school system as a year or so ago I had my pupils write down what elementary schools they had attended and found that they came from all over the United States. Weakness in arithmetic is a national problem."

The bell rang, and feeling not so bad about arithmetic, we walked the length of the school jostling other parents, and arrived at the gym for P. E.

Miss Stark, the girls' P. E. teacher was absent because of illness of her father, so William Wakefield took over both the boys' and girls' parents. Miss Stark had left word to tell the parents of the girls that she was a hard marker. That explained some of those Cs on the report cards and the girls' parents relaxed, as was demonstrated by Ted Fehring, who, when asked about a point in the boys' program (he was once coach at the high school) answered, "I stopped listening when you stopped talking about the girls." (Ted has five daughters.)

Buzzer! and off we went again, saying hello on every side, to Natural History and Miss Enid Larsen.

We were greeted by a spider. School Board Member Mrs. How-

Writers Asked To Drop A Note To Editor Alan Tory

Alan Tory, Associate Editor of West Coast Edition of Daily Press, is on the business end of a one-way telephone. This is because he and Mrs. Tory are occupying Mrs. R. Ellis Roberts home while he is talent hunting in Carmel, and while Mrs. Roberts is in the east. The phone is the sort that allows you to call people but does not allow people to call you. This is all very well for almost anyone but Mr. Tory who wants people to call him, specifically writers of both fiction and non-fiction.

He has asked the Pine Cone to pass on the word that he is looking for authors, "both novelists and writers of non-fiction, and would be glad to hear of likely manuscripts. I am specially looking for promising novelists." He explains about the phone adding, "the only way to reach me in this coming Thanksgiving week end will be by sending a note. If any authors of quality and initiative care to do this, I will telephone them."

The Torys will be here through November 28.

Address, Alan Tory, Rt. 2, Box 95, RFD, Carmel, care of Mrs. R. Ellis Roberts.

Tevis, Storer Tell Story Of California Grizzly

BY FREMONT O. BALLOU

The informative and comprehensive book just off the University of California Press, California Grizzly, by Tracy I. Storer and Lloyd P. Tevis, Jr., is one which should be of particular interest to Californians. The subject covered, the California grizzly, was an animal of such importance in the early history of the state that it was adopted as a California symbol and is commemorated in the Bear Flag, the Great Seal of California and in some two hundred place names.

Although the authors are both professional zoologists, the book is one which should appeal to the layman as well as the technical scientist. Tracy I. Storer is Professor of Zoology and Zoologist in the Agricultural Experiment Station, University of California, Davis, California, and Lloyd P. Tevis, Jr. is Assistant Specialist in the Department of Zoology at the same location. The junior author, who is a resident of Carmel, was formerly associated in research work with Dr. Jean M. Linsdale at the Frances Simes Hastings Natural History Reservation near Jamesburg in Monterey County.

In the introduction is given a description of the various species of living bears and the localities where they were originally found are described in the text and by means of a map. The first chapter gives an account of grizzlies in California in both prehistoric and modern times up to the date of their final extermination during the second decade of this century. Records of their distribution and

THANKSGIVING

NOW in this restless rushing here and there
Grinding away the substance of our lives
With mindless action, let us pause to share
A thought for that by which the world survives.
Too much we take for granted, strength and health,
Necessities and luxuries to spare,
Beauty of earth and sky, a constant wealth
Of natural goodness far beyond our prayer.

Thanksgiving adds a glory to the gift—
To take without response destroys the gleam—
A radiant heart of gratitude will lift
Both joy and sorrow far from what they seem.
Give thanks for all, the challenge and the strife,
The wonder and magnificence of life.

—DORA HAGEMEYER.

HARTNELL-MPC GRID CLASH TODAY

The 'Big Game' for both schools takes place at the Monterey Peninsula College stadium today when the Hartnell Panthers clash head on with the fired-up MPC Lobos. Kickoff time will be at 12 noon and reports indicate the game will draw a record crowd to the cozy Lobo stadium. Friend-less in the coaching department, the Lobos favorites to defeat the Hartnell eleven and complete the most successful season in MPC history—10 wins and 1 loss. While petty bickerings and childish difference of opinion have caused Dick Friend to be grounded as Lobo coach, popular Tor Spindler, hefty line coach will guide the MPC strategy in this big one. Under Friend's astute coaching and deft handling of his material, the Lobos have improved with each game and now rank with the top junior colleges in California.

Hartnell mentor, Ken Blue, will be out to make it two in a row over the favored Lobos and latch onto second place in the Coast JC conference. Last Thanksgiving Day, the Lobos were also favored to defeat Blue's cohorts but the fighting Panthers failed to read the odds and rolled to an easy victory over the Monterey collegians. Against the league champion, Menlo College, the figures favor Hartnell who held the mighty Oaks to a 19-19 draw while Monterey was being butchered by the same Menlo crew, 33 to 7. But as all football filberts are aware, odds mean little in a game loaded with natural rivalry and the bounce of the little prolate spheroid could decide the whole thing.

BASKETBALL NEXT TUESDAY WATSONVILLE VS. CARMEL

With only two week's practice with the roundball, Carmel High cagers swing into action against the strong Watsonville Wildcats next Tuesday afternoon at the Carmel pavilion. A veteran squad is back for another season's play and the Padres will be shooting to add the basketball title to the football championship which came their way this year. Watsonville also has a veteran squad returning and the Wildcats are picked as prime favorites to cop the A division flag.

Carmel's varsity squad will be manned by forwards Bob Wise, Tom Peyton, Dick Ogden, Mervin Sutton, and Clyde Klaumann; the guards Dick Jennings, Mike Mosolf, Charley Dawson, David Gray, and Bill McCormack; center Geo. Wightman and Bob Durbrow. McCormack, Sutton, and Durbrow were letter winners with the lightweights last year, Peyton is a transfer from Virginia where he played junior-varsity ball, and Gray is making his first try at basketball. All the other players are lettermen from last year's team and have been well-seasoned by competition.

Starting against the Wildcats next Tuesday afternoon will be four six-footers, Wightman (All-CCAL center last year), Sutton (All-CCAL lightweight center last year), Wise, and Mosolf. Dick Jennings, the other starter, at 5-9, is the short one of the quintet but is a fine play maker and can hit from the outside.

Coach Buzz Rainer's lightweight team tackle the Watsonville Kittens in the 4 o'clock preliminary which will find both teams going with untried squads. Only Carmel veteran left from last year's lightweight starting team is Jim Konrad, talented all-league guard with three years lightweight experience. Others from last season's reserve squad are Bert Macahalig, Jack Faia, Ted Childers, Jim Bannerman, and Jim Lee. Looking good in practice and sure to make a strong bid for starting spots are Art Wilkerson, Bill Harder, Walter Helm, Andy Gray, Dale Dawson, Graves Cox, Bill Hicks, Tim O'Shea, John Morse, Jamie Holman and Hampton Stewart.

TWENTY-GAME SCHEDULE FOR THE PADRE CAGERS

Carmel High basketball players are in for one of the busiest hoop seasons in the history of the school, competing in 20 games plus the league jamboree and the Carmel Tournament. Opening with Watsonville High on Tuesday, November 29 and closing with the Carmel Tourney on March 1, 2, and 3rd, the Padre hoopsters will play at least one game each week and on several occasions will take on two games a week. In league play, Carmel will meet each team in the B division of the CCAL twice. This

Dr. Thurman Mask By Liesel Wurzmann At Carmel Gallery

Jean Burden writing in the October issue of The Atlantic describes Dr. Howard Thurman thusly; "one is conscious of his 'bigness'; another says he gives off warmth like a wood stove. One thinks he is 'plain ugly'; another calls him 'handsome.' In repose his face is sad. His eyes are large and expressive, his nose is finely sculptured . . . his humor, is as famous as his eloquence."

All these qualities except the eloquence are admirably expressed in the mask of Dr. Thurman now on display at the Carmel Art Gallery and executed in ceramic medium by Liesel Wurzmann.

Dr. Thurman is on leave from his Fellowship Church in San Francisco and is the first colored man to be the Dean of the Chapel at Boston University, head of a six-member board of preachers and Professor of Spiritual Disciplines and Resources in the School of Theology at the university.

Miss Wurzmann first met Dr. Thurman when she attended his church for the fellowship of all peoples in San Francisco and was impressed with his kindliness, understanding and magnetic personality. She has done her mask from photographs and memory and apart from being a profound piece of portraiture of Dr. Thurman it should be recognized as an especially fine piece of ceramic sculpture. Notable is the treatment of the face in planes and particularly the fine work of the cheeks of the face. The work stands on its own merit as a sculpture. —M.L.

The Time Has Come .

By Kippy Stuart

No one is going to be interested in gardens on this, our Thanksgiving day. Let's face it; we are in the process of digestion, not mental acrobatics. Just the same, our gardens are staring at us through the windows and the same old controversy is now upon us. Each fall the question presents itself: when shall we prune our fuchsias? My steady answer through the years has been, "Let the fuchsias tell you themselves when they wish to be pruned." There are over four thousand varieties of fuchsias and each matures with different habits. Some plants sail right through to January giving forth leaf and colorful flowers.

Others wither and grow sear and yellow, and this variety is screaming for help. I, myself, begin to cut back fuchsias early in November for two reasons; one to help the plants and bring them into flower earlier in the Spring,—the other reason is to keep my patio as neat as possible. A fuchsia that is going to sleep doesn't care how much litter and trash it showers about a patio and if I left my plants until January to prune, I would be walking knee-deep in litter for months. In fifteen years I have never had a pruned fuchsia freeze.

So, take your choice and don't let anyone tell you that there is a hard and fast rule when to prune and when not to prune . . . in other words, "to be or not to be". . . and Happy Thanksgiving to everyone.

Charles E. Casey

Charles Edward Casey died off Sunday at the age of 70 in his home on Camino Real. He had been ill with a cardiac condition for some time.

Mr. Casey came to Carmel to live 15 years ago when he retired from an executive position with the Standard Vacuum Oil Company of New York. He had been employed with the company for many years with his headquarters in the Philippine Islands.

He was born in Kemmer, Wyoming, on January 20, 1885. Mr. Casey was a member of the Elks Lodge of Ogden, Utah.

Survivors are his wife, Blanche, of Carmel; a son, Charles E. Casey, Jr., of San Bruno; and a sister, Mrs. Marie Rutledge of Los Angeles.

Funeral services were held on Monday in the Little Chapel-by-the-Sea Crematorium with Dr. Joseph Ewing of the Carmel Presbyterian Church officiating. Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

Ballet Academy In Final Rehearsal For "The Nutcracker"

For the fifth season the Carmel Ballet Academy is in rehearsal for a full length classic ballet. Over 70 dancers are taking part in this year's choice, the perennial favorite Christmas entertainment, "The Nutcracker", to be presented for three performances the first weekend of December at Sunset Auditorium.

The two act, six scene extravaganza will have original choreography by Joanne Nix, director of the Academy, based on the version by Ballanchine presented by the Sadler's Wells Ballet. It will be danced to the uncut version of Tchaikowsky's famous music as composed for the the first presentation of the ballet in St. Petersburg on December 17, 1892.

Among the adults taking part in this production are Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Bissantz (Mr. Bissantz plays the part of a prosperous pater familias of the 1800's in whose home the first act is laid), Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Wurzmann, Jean Larsen, Joan Shirlie and Cole Weston.

Joan Willicombe and Susan Shirlie play the parts of the children of the family and Pamela Beales, the lovely Sleeping Beauty of last year's ballet, dances the role of the Sugar Plum Fairy in the magical kingdom of the second act.

The Nutcracker will be performed for two evening performances and a matinee, December 2 and 3 at 8:30 in the evening and December 4 at 2:30 in the afternoon.

Clarence Bates Works In The Material He Finds Near At Hand

father, served as a scout for the early wagon trains making their way across the Continent.

In any case, Clancy, his brother Ray, formerly a photographer in Carmel, another brother and two sisters were all farm country youngsters. Clancy went to high school in Oak Ridge, Oregon and, after an interlude of several years, to the University of Oregon at Eugene. During this interlude he held a variety of jobs. For one, he worked in a saw-mill. And here he developed a genuine feeling for wood as he watched every type and variety go past. Whenever a particularly beautiful piece of curly fir came in, he would put it aside and work on it during his spare time.

For a time Bates worked in a railroad roundhouse, and finally in a wood-working shop as a designer and carved for decorative panels. Here he finally decided that art was his field and entered the University to study under Oliver Barrett, and major in fine arts. His progress was rapid, and by his third year he was serving as an instructor on the staff.

In 1936 a friend entered one of Bates works, a carving of a cougar and cub, in the Northwest Artists Show at the Seattle Art Museum. To Bates' surprise he won a prize in one of the stiffest competitions on the Coast. Encouraged by this and other recognition, Bates finally left the University to go to Salem, and then to Le Grande, as supervisor of the Art Centers in those cities.

Christmas of 1940 he went to San Francisco to open his own studio. An opportunity presented itself to become manager of the building in which he had his workshop. This solved both the question of rent and partial income, taking the pressure off his work to a degree. He also became friendly with an architect who specialized in doing lodge buildings and fire stations throughout California and the West. In his plans he always included some sculpted plaques. Bates says, "I've probably carved more Elks-heads than anybody in the country."

He stayed happily at work here until 1943, when he entered the Army and eventually served with an air warning net in New Guinea and the Philippines. He continued to work during this period whenever possible, entering several soldier's exhibitions, and took his discharge from Clark Field in 1945 to join the Red Cross as an arts and crafts supervisor for the Northern Philippines. Here Bates spent a year working in and out of Manila. When he returned to San Francisco in 1946 he met Alex Weygers, whom he had known formerly. Weygers extolled the virtues of the Peninsula so fervently that Bates moved to Carmel Valley for a year and a half and then finally to Carmel.

Here he has continued to live and work. In 1948 he married Kitty Brailsford, a Carmel girl. They have one six-year-old son, Unlike many artists Bates is not so self-absorbed that he is uninterested in the community around him. When the mayor wished artist representation on the Carmel Planning Commission, Bates goodnaturedly accepted the appointment and has been faithful in his attendance at the long and sometimes trying meetings. His common sense and good judgment have been as valuable in board of adjustment decisions as his training as an artist in evaluating landscape and building plans.

Bates is enthusiastic about the Carmel Crafts Center, saying that in the years since the war he had had gradually to switch to painting because of the difficulties in marketing sculpture. With the coming of the center he has been able to return to his first love, and is doing well at selling the results.

Also his style has changed. Where his carvings were formerly basically simplified figurines, he has now begun to alter forms to suit himself.

Of contemporary sculptors, Henry Moore, Archipenko, and Jacob Lipschutz have interested him most; and among the masters, Michaelangelo and Maillol.

Bates feels that a sculptor should make use of local materials. As a result, his carving, in recent years, has mostly been done with driftwood, redwood, buckeye and cypress — all locally available. Occasionally he secures ironwood from the desert country around Palm Springs.

His obsession with materials has deeply interested Bates in current art work with new material such as metal and plastics. He feels that there is much experimenting to be done in order to utilize the inherent qualities of such materials as plastics, particularly their translucence, color, and moldability.

Bates points out that the sculptor works with form itself, in contra-distinction to the painter who works with the illusion of form. This places greater constraint and discipline on the sculptor. And while it may constrain his scope, there is much pioneer work to be done in the field.

With a renaissance of public interest in sculpture, Bates feels that he is finally in the right place at the right time with the right experience and background to create the kind of art he has sought for all his life. —Bob Kaller.

LOCAL "BIG GAME" TODAY

Climaxing a week of excitement which included a bonfire rally Monday, "Slave Day" Tuesday, Homecoming parade, dance, and election of a queen and attendants Wednesday, and alumni breakfast this morning at 9:00 o'clock, Monterey College will play its annual Thanksgiving Day Football Game today.

Kickoff is at 1:00 o'clock at Monterey College football field. Between halves the queen and her attendants will be presented, and when the final gun goes off, the matter of who is to be custodian of The Keg until next Thansgiving day will be settled.

Mr. Madison's Pleasing Voice

"Mr. Madison and Miss Mathews sing some rousing duets. Mr. Madison has an exceptional stage presence and a remarkably pleasing voice. Unusually pleasing," says George Browning, reviewing the road show performance of The King and I in Rochester for Playboy Magazine.

"Mr. Madison" is Robert Jensen, son of Roxy Jensen, who has chosen Jerry Madison as a stage name. Carmelites had the pleasure of watching Robert Jensen develop the "exceptional stage presence and remarkably pleasing voice," while he was still a high school student here, not so many years ago, when he was in much demand for local entertainments.

Carmel Composer's Songs On Chamber Music Program

Songs composed by Hascal Vaughn Stewart of Carmel will be sung by Korah Hahn, Korean soprano, on the program of the first subscription concert of the Carmel Chamber Music Society which will be given on the evening of December 4 at 8:00 o'clock in the Carmel Craft Studios.

Mrs. Stewart has written both the lyrics and the music for the songs which will be performed by candlelight in the patio of the Craft Studios. Three Walks will be given its first performance on this occasion. This is a suite composed of three songs, Dou You Like To Cross Bridges?; Sand is Washed; and Tread Lightly Here.

In addition to the Three Walks suite the following songs, also composed by Mrs. Stewart, will be sung by Korah Hahn with violin obligato; The Wind Is In Delicate Balance; Night, Thinking of Babies and The Door.

The concert will be under the direction of Gilbert Boyer, director and founder of the Carmel Chamber Music Society.

Gene McComas Has Collected Color Around The World And Put It On Canvas In Current One Man Show

By Elizabeth Lawrence

In the current one man exhibit of 28 of her canvases at the Carmel Art Association Galleries, artist Gene McComas has attained a new synthesis between the two aspects of painting which most preoccupy her — color and dimension. In oils, water colors and gouaches, which indicate a constantly maturing talent, the gifted Peninsula artist employs her dual themes both to intensify each other, and in bold juxtaposition.

In this latest showing of her work, Mrs. McComas displays a brilliance of color that reflects her journeys to Tahiti, the byways of Mexico, to southern Alaska, and to Italy, France and Spain. "I'm mad about color. I'd like it to be as brilliant as stained glass," she tells us, "but I haven't achieved it yet." The modesty of the artist belies the splendor of color which flows from her brush on to canvasses which range from still lifes, through primitive portraits, to Cezanne-like landscapes.

Most interesting, perhaps, to many viewers at the Sixth and Dolores Street galleries, will be Mrs. McComas' forceful portraits of primitive Indian types from the State of Chuapas in Mexico, an area bordering on Guatamala, where the aboriginal tongue, unadulterated by Spanish or neighboring dialects, still is spoken.

In her oil, "Tehautepec Women," Gene McComas has found scope for love of color and her dexterity with space relationships. In the rendering of three female figures in black, white and grey, supported by vibrant, pillar-like flashes of emerald green and strong yellow, the artist utilizes color to give a feeling of monumental solidity to her trio of Indian women.

"Two Heads," another McComas primitive portrait, gains dramatic impact with its pair of Indians forcefully represented in earth browns and deep blacks against a daring coral-red ground.

Gene McComas, an artist who has progressed from an early academic viewpoint to one which reflects the influence of the great schools of modern art dominant during her lifetime, finds her way, too, within the more conventional realms of fine representational painting. Canvases like "Vermont Apples," "Garden Still Life," and "Pears and Pomegranates," are works which mirror the artist's passion for color, but which attest also to her linear craftsmanship.

"Tahitian Arabesque," a water color, beguiling in its range of pinks, deep rose, greyed-blues and a palette of tropical greens, reveals that Mrs. McComas, like Gauguin before her, was captivated by the legendary beauty of Tahiti. Other landscapes in the show include "Fiesta at Ojeda," with a Cezanne-like rendering of planes and "Paco's Bar (Tasco)." The latter painting, which many viewers may find the most striking, if not the most controversial, in the show, vividly illustrates the artist's concern with dimension. This canvas literally flames with color, and virtually breathes with movement in its bold juxtaposition of planes.

The Gene McComas paintings will be on view through November 30 in the George Beardsley Memorial Room of the Carmel Art Association Galleries.

Local Movie Goers Showing Interest In Audience Poll

Lester Immerman manager of the Carmel Theatre, reports that local movie goers are showing a lively interest in the first annual audience award poll which is being conducted in theatres throughout the country from November 16 through November 27.

The poll which gives the theatre patrons an opportunity to vote for their choice of best picture, best actor and actress and most promising new screen personalities, got off to an auspicious start with an official proclamation from Governor Goodwin Knight. After urging Californians to participate in the poll, Governor Knight said:

"Californians are proud of the pre-eminent position our state occupies in the development and activities of the motion picture industry, with its manifold corollary artistic crafts. The men and women whose talents and skills have brought this industry from infancy to magnificent maturity in less than a generation constitute an important segment of our economy. Through their efforts millions of dollars each year swell the income of our people, and thousands of dollars are paid annually in taxes to assist in financing the many public services which Californians enjoy."

FROM A LIBRARIAN'S NOTEBOOK

By Ruth Galvin Thornburg

This library is happy to report that Book Week was a great success. Classes came in groups to view the books and to hear Mrs. Heisinger talk about them. Almost every child who had no library card decided to take out a card. On Saturday morning, when the new books were to be charged out, there was an enthusiastic group of children waiting out in front of the building for the opening hour. We checked out 27 books the first 15 minutes of the day and they kept on going all day long. Book Week is a lot of work, but it is a heartwarming experience when the children respond as they did this year.

Next week we have five new novels for you, and included in the five is the latest Rex Stout mystery which is entitled Before Midnight. Some of the Stout mysteries are better than others, but all are entertaining, and this one looks good. It is concerned with a mysterious disappearance and a murder in a group of advertising experts. The Far Journey by Loula Grace Erdman is the story of a long wagon trip taken in the early days by a woman and her small son. Many adventures befell her before she reached her destination. The Other Half of the Orange is a story of foreign intrigue and it was written by J. M. Scott.

The fourth novel is a best-seller by Frederic Wakeman entitled The Fabulous Train. Its action spans one week in the life of Hal Sample, a twenty-one year old resident of Carbon City, a dying coal mining town in Kansas. The last one is Tents Against the Sky, a novel of Tibet, by Robert Ekvall. The author is an anthropologist who has long been a student of the country.

Going into the non-fiction field, we have a new book by Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., describing the historic buildings in America. Most of them are houses, but there are a few missions and included here are California's own mission chain. The book is illustrated with photographs, and is entitled The Living Past of America. The first two paper bound volumes of The Modern Theatre, in the Anchor Book editions, were edited by Eric Bentley. Each volume contains five plays by modern authors. A study of sex in nature, from the tiny amoeba to man, is described by John Langdon-Davies in his book called Seeds of Life. In her book Heaven Was Not Enough, Constance O'Mara has given us a frank autobiography, and also an account of how she lost her faith and then regained it.

The great French writer Gustave Flaubert died in 1880, and it was not until 1910 that his Dictionary of Platitudes was discovered by E. L. Ferrere while doing research among Flaubert's papers. The book was first published in 1913. In 1954 an English translation was published. The definitions in the book are Flaubert's ideas of the conversational banalities of the time. The editors have added material in brackets to explain to today's readers things which would have been clear to the reader of a hundred years ago.

Nancie Brown To Marry

Thanksgiving Day will be the wedding day of Nancie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mackay Brown and Willard Burgess Moore of the Army Language School. They will be married at a small home ceremony and a reception for Nancie and Bill will be given by Mr. and Mrs. Brown early in December.

Nancie attended Sunset School and graduated from Carmel High School in 1950. She continued her education at Stanford for two years and then went to the Pasadena Playhouse for two years as the winner of a dramatic scholarship. She has appeared frequently in local plays and had the lead in the Forest Theater production of Baby Be Still, the Masten-Monahan-Adams production of 1953.

Bill, her future husband, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Moore of Poughkeepsie, New York. He is a graduate of Rutgers University where he majored in English and was affiliated with Delta Upsilon fraternity. He is at present studying Russian at the Army Language School at the Presidio and expects an overseas assignment following graduation in May.

Major Haphey In Korea

Major Robert D. Haphey has been with the Korean Military Advisory Group at Yongsan, Korea, for two months and Mrs. Haphey and the children are living in Carmel Valley while he is away. They arrived here last August from Storrs, Connecticut, where Major Haphey had been teaching military science at the University of Connecticut.

Bruce, the Haphey's older son, is a junior at Carmel High School, Alison their daughter, is in the second grade at Tularcitos School and the youngest Haphey, Robert, Jr., is still at home as he is only three years old.

Major Haphey will spend 16 months in Korea and is one of over 2,000 highly trained officers and enlisted specialists who counsel the Republic of Korea on all phases of military training, tactics and operations.

Mrs. Laura Chester is in Elizabeth City, North Carolina, visiting her daughter, Mrs. John J. Cash, and expects to be away until the middle of January. She flew East but plans to return by train and stop in Houston and San Antonio to visit friends.

Dixons Sorting Trove

Mr. and Mrs. B. Franklin Dixon have been home for several weeks but they are still sorting out the possessions which they acquired on an almost eleven months trip to the Antipodes. Indonesia, South Africa, South America, Mexico, Hawaii, French China, Japan, and a few other places, too, such as Singapore, Hong Kong and Fiji.

Mr. Dixon reports that they were surprised to find great forests of Monterey pine on both the North and South Islands of New Zealand. These were first imported to New Zealand in 1865 and are now grown in long straight rows in government forests, which are forested, the trees processed into pulp which supplies paper to the Asiatic countries, South Africa and Indonesia.

"The trees seem perfectly at home in New Zealand", reports Mr. Dixon, "and foresters are now interested in importing redwoods from California to be grown for lumber to be used in building". Sequoias from Sequoia National Park are already growing in New Zealand. "Just a few, according to "Dickie".

All was not peaceful on the Dixon's trip as in Saigon they were near the fighting and an American Red Cross ship in the harbor went out each morning to pick up the wounded from both sides. The American Express office was blown up. At a reception at the palace, given for an American and an English diplomat, the Dixons "really had it". First the band played God Save the Queen six times while everyone stayed rigidly at attention and then, just as the American and the Englishman shook hands, three nearby gas tanks blew up, caught fire and the reception concluded with flames leaping three hundred feet into the air.

They visited the Great Barrier Reef off Australia but the sea was so rough that they were unable to really see all the wonders of the reef, "So we have to go back," said Mr. Dixon.

In the Chilean mountains they met a group of American skiers from Denver University who carried off first, second and fourth places in the competition, and the snow was 28 feet deep.

Back home and unpacking "the most beautiful places we saw", says Dickie, "were both the islands of New Zealand and the islands of Japan with the azaleas in bloom".

Stephenson To Nassau

Bahamas Speed Week at Nassau from December 5-11 will have local representation in the sports car races as I. W. Stephenson of Pebble Beach leaves tomorrow with his new Jaguar 140MC aboard a one and a half ton truck for the journey across country to Miami and then by ship to Nassau.

This is the second time that Stephenson has gone to Nassau for Speed Week and he reports that it is a gala time in the British colony with everything opened up for the entertainment of the drivers. He had intended to take an Osca car this year but delivery in time for the races was impossible, even by air, from Europe, so he settled for a new Jaguar which he bought sight unseen and which was delivered to him on Tuesday from Fresno.

Stephenson was winner in the Pebble Beach class G. race this year, took three awards, two firsts and a second at Steamboat Springs, Colorado, on Memorial Day and last month won the class H. trophy at the Salinas races.

Board Votes Aid To Youth Center; To Buy Two Sites

The school board, with a three to two vote, granted the Carmel Youth Center's request for $600. "If and when the need becomes acute." Pros were Mrs. Howard Elton Clark, Glen Leidig; opposed, Gordon Campbell, Mrs. Julian von Meier. Chairman J. O. Handley broke the tie with his yes vote.

The board empowered Stuart Mitchell, school superintendent, to arrange with William Hatton to buy 10 acres, three-fourths of a mile up Carmel Valley, south of the Valley road, for a school site, the price offered by the board, $2500 per acre. Mitchell is to arrange for a long term option on 40 additional acres.

He was authorized also to negotiate with Bert Dienelt for purchase of 10 acres south of River school for playground development. The board intends to build five more classrooms at River, and the ten acres are needed to meet state minimum site requirements for a 10-classroom school.

Mitchell was meeting with Dienelt Wednesday afternoon, Gladys Johnston acting as arbitrator, in an effort to reach a price compromise.

Five Approve, Five Opposed All Saints' Electronic Carillon

Public reaction to the proposed carillon for All Saints' was divided at the public hearing before the planning commission last week. Five written objections were presented, and five people spoke in favor of the carillon.

Planning commission members said they would wait until the church committee could provide them with a recording of carillion music before they decided if they would permit the church to install the electronic bells.

One planning commission member, Mrs. Hurd Comstock, said she thought the recording was aside from the point. The issue was not whether or not carillon music is beautiful. "A thing of beauty when imposed on a people can become the opposite, she said.

Other planning commission members were undecided, with the exception of Mrs. Gladys Kiplinger and Mrs. Talbert Josselyn.

Eben Whittlesey, representing the church, said the church would be willing to limit the use of the carillon to a ten minute period before 11:00 o'clock on Sundays and holidays. Robert Forbes, organist, said he had interviewed 37 people in the area surrounding the church and only one had told him he objected the church's installing the carillon.

It was pointed out that the volume of sound can be controlled to such an extent that it cannot be heard outside the church, but Whittlesey said the congregation wanted it heard outside the church.

Charles E. Corbin, Mrs. L. E. Harting, J. Van Aman and Mrs. Norman Strong, living in the vicinity of the church, said they would like to hear the carillon. People writing in saying they would not were: Catherine Davis, Mrs. Sinclair Kerby-Miller, Cordelia A. Gilman, Enid B., E. S. and H. B. Somerville, Loreto Candy and Gladys R. Johnston. Mrs. Johnston was the only objector who is not a near neighbor of the church but she owns property in the area. Since the carillon would be heard all over town, the planning commission was prepared to consider reactions of people from anywhere within the sound of the bells.

Both objectors and proponents used the appropriateness-to-the character-of-Carmel argument. Quiet and the rights of privacy are characteristic of the spirit of Carmel, said the objectors; bell music would be appropriate to a musically minded community such as Carmel, said the pro carilloners.

One of Mrs. Kiplinger's objections was that if one church were allowed to install a carillon, the rest would follow suit. She said, "When a carillon cost between thirty and fifty thousand dollars, small cities were fairly safe from them, but now the electronic ones are available for five or six thousand dollars, almost any church can have one."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERMON

Man's need for spiritual alertness will be emphasized in the Lesson-Sermon "Ancient and Modern Necromancy, alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced" at Christian Science services Sunday.

Selections from the Bible will include the following pasages from the Sermon on the Mount (Matt. 7:15, 16): "Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

From "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, the following will be read (134:28): "There is divine authority for believing in the superiority of spiritual power over material resistance."

The Golden Text is from I Corinthians (16:13): "Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong."

THIS IS AN OPPORTUNE TIME TO BUY—We have some drastic reductions in both unimproved and improved property. Too numerous to mention. Call us for information.

Conservation On The March

A Weekly Column by
C. Edward Graves
Western Representative,
National Parks Association

SAVING THE MCKENZIE

I devoted part of my column on on June 23 to the threat of ruining the scenic values of the Upper McKenzie River in central Oregon in order to provide the city of Eugene with a small amount of power, actually 7500 kilowatts of firm power. This can be bought from the Bonneville Power Administration, and the City of Eugene is seeking it only in order to be independent of the Northwest power pool.

Now comes word that the Examiner for the Federal Power Commission, who held a hearing on June 27, has approved the city's application for this project. The Conservation Committee of the Mazamas, Oregon's largest mountaineering organization, has published a stirring appeal to the public to help reverse his decision, which is subject to review by the full commission. "If you are incensed by this decision", they say, "and we think you should be, please sit down for a few minutes and write a letter of protest to Jerome K. Kuykendall, Chairman, Federal Power Commission, Washington, D. C. Your letters will help — won't you do your part NOW!"

This is one issue in which Secretary of the Interior Douglas McKay is with us. He has stated that two streams in Oregon should be retained intact as recreational streams — the Rogue and the McKenzie. I think that anyone who has visited the upper McKenzie would agree with him.

I am going to quote a few paragraphs of the eloquent and well-reasoned appeal of the Mazama Conservation Committee in this matter. They have written: "This is the project which will make Clear Lake a fluctuating reservoir and divert the McKenzie River through an 8000-foot long tunnel around Koosah and Sahalie Falls. The recommendation concluded that "adequate" protection would be provided for the scenic and recreational values. This protection would consist of allowing Clear Lake to fill up on week ends and a regulated flow of water to go over the falls during daylight hours —in the summer months only—on a push-button basis.

"The conclusion of the Examiner is not one likely to endear himself in the eyes of vast numbers of scenery-loving Oregonians. Gone will be the thunderous roar of those tremendous falls, for they will be reduced to a fraction of their former glory. Gone will be the spray-soaked idyllic setting, for it is doubtful if the lush carpet of green moss can survive during the long periods of drought. Gone, too, will be a 500-foot swath of trees running for miles down the river. In its place will be the transmission lines.

"Adequate protection? The term is ironic and tragic. Ironic because the grandeur and inspiration of a great natural wonder will be traded by a government bureau for the romance of a kitchen faucet. Tragic because so unnecessary. Unnecessary because Eugene does not need this source of power. Actually, if the Eugene Water and Electric Board had deliberately set out to despoil the most magnificent piece of scenery available to it, it could hardly have chosen a likelier spot."

"I thought I couldn't do anything about my wife's 'washday blues'...

and then I got her an automatic dryer!"

Oh, the difference a dryer can make in a woman's washday mood! Gone is the back-breaking work—the lugging and stooping, the pinning-up and taking-in. All the lady does is cheerfully drop the clothes in the dryer—and in less than an hour, they're fluffy dry. Or ready for ironing, if she prefers. A dryer makes good budget sense, too. With P. G. and E.'s low rates, it runs for pennies a week. Does your wife still get the washday blues? Then see your appliance dealer about your new automatic dryer, today!

"Algebra Isn't What It Used To Be;" Carmel Parents Go To School

ard Clark had just brought to class the fanciest big yellow member of the Arachnid family, in a jar, and well supplied with flies.

Miss Larsen explained that the natural history course is to familiarize the students with their immediate world. "It is a shame that students should live in one of the most interesting places in the world and not know about their surroundings," she said.

As a result of the students' interest that day Adrian Bennett freshman, had brought to school a fish he had caught and it is now part of the permanent collection of Stanford's Hopkins Marine Station. The fish had wandered far from its natural habitat, been caught by Ade Bennett, and, unfortunately, eviscerated. Ade had intended to eat it, but he got to thinking that he didn't often catch a fish that looked as though it had red ink spilled over it. So off to school went the fish and then to Hopkins for identification and then a request from Dr. Rolf Bolin that the Marine Station might keep it for its collection, at least until they could have another of the species that hadn't been eviscerated.

Board member Gordon Campbell had been busy in science, too. That morning he had delivered to the class a large keyhole limpet and a giant chiton.

"Lucky, lucky, science students," we thought as the bell rang for dinner-lunch, and we proceeded to the cafeteria, very hungry.

Refreshed by turkey and pumpkin pie and coffee we approached English 9, taught by Mrs. Frances Davis. Here we all introduced ourselves and identified ourselves by our children and heard Mrs. Davis explain how she builds up vocabulary for our children through the years, teaches them the mechanics of writing and lures them into the field of extra reading.

And then came choir.

"We are here for fun," said Teacher John Farr, and before we knew it we were all breathing with our diaphrahm and singing the solfa scale and then again using a fine "ah-ah-ah." We had fun, and laughed, and listened to Mr. Farr tell how he believes anyone can learn to sing and that he has his students sing and sing and sing, everything from fine old music to swing style, and in the end they know what vocal music is and have had fun and have gained self-confidence from learning to sing in small quartets and alone. Again we were impressed by the spirit of the Carmel High School teachers, who inspire their students to learn with joy.

Last class was Spanish and we happened to be one of the parents of Donald Craig's most fabulous class to date, and did we feel smug, as he explained that out of the class of 23 students, 12 had received As, in the recent quarter examinations. Three were B students and the rest were coming along. However, lest, some of us be too smug, Mr. Craig explained that the girls went "haywire" in their sophomore year and there was a slump in their work.

"They recover, though," he encouraged the parents, "and sail along the rest of the two years."

Mr. Craig explained how he encouraged students to know every aspect of a language, the background culture and the present status of the country. How he found that there were "interest slumps" in learning and how he planned expeditions to such places as the Army Language School and a foreign language movie, and, whoops! the enthusiasm for learning surged again in the high school mind.

We were impressed that the members of this class, meeting at the end of the day when they might be tired and disinterested, had been so inspired to learn by Mr. Craig that they were his "fabulous" class.

School was over. We all met for a general assembly in the cafetorium, where PTA president Dr. Roderick Clayton told us what the committee investigating the matter had recommended that the High School PTA, which is a part of the Carmel PTA, is now strong enough to stand on its own feet and become an independent organization.

Decision concerning the withdrawal will be made at the February meeting of the Carmel PTA when a two thirds vote is necessary to make the separation possible.

Mike Dormody In Florida

Mike Dormody, who is stationed aboard the USS Coral Sea based at Norfolk, Virginia, is at present spending a 20 day leave exploring Florida by car. Mike hopes to be home for Christmas with his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Horace Dormody and to be out of the Navy early in the new year. Pam Dormody is also planning to be home for Christmas with her parents and will fly out from New York where she is now living.

Hoppy Steingubbing

The group of immigrants on Ellis Island was confused. It was an odd day. Their arrival in the United States was the end of a long and determined effort to leave the pogroms, the political oppressions, the wars, the poverty and unhappiness of their homeland. They were eager to be in the land of the brave, to pick up the silver dollars just lying on the sidewalks of America, to seize the golden opportunities, and above all to be free to say what they thought. But nothing was being done that day to release them into the new world. All the officials, the workers, either were not at work or obviously anxious to be away from their duties. What was happening to all the Americans today?

Apprehensive, they delegated the one member of their group, who could speak English, to find out what calamity had befallen the ordered life of Ellis Island.

"Hoppy Steingubbing", he reported to the immigrant group after consultation.

One and all they joined in the spirit of Hoppy Steingubbing. They were in America to be Americans! Each shook the other's hand. Laughing and gay, they embraced one another, they toasted Hoppy Steingubbing in their water glasses and as the spirit of the feast grew apace they danced their vigorous native dances, and sang and made music and that part of America rang and echoed to the cries of "Hoppy Steingubbing". It was a true festival in a new land all the rest of the day.

Hoppy Steingubbing to you today.

population from the early Spanish days up to the time of their final disappearance are given. Although there had been a continuous conflict between man and these powerful and courageous animals, their numbers appear to have increased during the Spanish pastoral era. This was apparently due to increase in numbers of flocks and herds of domestic animals which afforded the bears an abundant supply of meat. At one time there were estimated to have been about ten thousand of these grizzlies in California. However their doom was sounded by the coming of the gold miners and later the more permanent settlers, who waged continuous warfare on the mammals and from that period on their disappearance was most rapid.

Subsequent chapters cover the grizzly's physical features, habits, their relations with Indians, Spaniards and later Americans and other immigrants. One chapter is devoted to the life and adventures of Grizzly Adams, colorful character of the latter period. Final chapters cover the subjects Grizzly Lore and The California Grizzly as an Emblem. The Appendixes and Bibliography at the end of the volume cover 44 pages, giving some idea of the vast amount of research involved in preparing this book which is the most complete of its kind yet published.
